Editorial Review

Amazon.com Review

If you fear you might go on a rampage if you hear the lyrics to "Wheels on the Bus" even one more time, take heart: These reimagined, "silly dilly" lyrics can breathe new life into kid favorites like "Wheels," "Itsy Bitsy Spider," and even "Bingo."

Just as they did with Take Me Out of the Bathtub, Alan Katz and David Catrow lampoon the classics with rowdy humor and fun-to-sing rhymes. "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands"? Nope. Try "He's Got the Whole Beach in His Pants." "Frere Jacques" becomes "I'm a menace" and you can forget about old McDonald and his farm--that tune now tells the story of "My friend Donald's catfish parm."

Katz wisely keeps the lyrics from straying too far into bathroom territory, keeping the fun both palatable and genuinely funny, and illustrator Catrow (Plantzilla, Santa Claustrophobia) again proves an indispensable member of the team, with wry details and memorable characters. (Ages 4 to 8) --Paul Hughes

From School Library Journal

Grade 2-5-As a follow-up to Take Me Out of the Bathtub (McElderry, 2001), Katz packs the same child-appealing humor into sadly sloppy lyrics that don't scan with the well-known tunes he has tried to fit them to, and which go on far too long. "I Always Lose" (to the tune of "Skip to My Lou") starts with the loss of a parka, backpack, and tuba, and continues, "Turned around, lunch box was gone/Could've sworn I had a hat on/There's no sign of baby bro Ron/He's a pain, but he's darling." "No Medication" (to the tune of "Down by the Station") does what most kids dream of doing: "No medication/Don't care what the doc says/Won't put that stuff in my belly/Tastes bad, you know/Mom sticks it in ice cream/Thinks that she can fool me/I flick it out the window/Look out below!" Unfortunately, the lyrics are even more awkward and less funny when read aloud instead of sung. Catrow's over-the-top, zany, mixed-media cartoons may pull readers into this collection that promises fun, but only delivers frustration.

PreS-Gr. 3. The author and illustrator of Take Me out of the Bathtub (2001) present another collection of humorous alternative lyrics for well-known children's songs, with fresh topics ranging from brussels sprouts and too-smoochy aunts to unidentifiable camp food. To the tune of "Itsy Bitsy Spider," kids can now sing, "My tiny baby brother / Took our remote control / When I wasn't looking / He flushed it down the bowl." "My Sister Fights with Me" is a not-so-solemn hymn to sibling rivalry set to the tune of "My Country 'Tis of Thee." Occasionally the songs don't follow the expected tune, resulting in some awkwardness in rhythm; there's no musical notation; and some vocabulary and humor will sit better with the school-age crowd. Still, most children will recognize the tunes, and the cartoonish watercolor, pencil, and ink illustrations, filled with witty exaggerations and details, are an exuberantly outlandish and apt accompaniment to the wacky words.
